

Homecoming ends without expected disruptions

BY MOLLY ROSSITER
Staff Writer

After months of hard work and preparation, in just three short days Homecoming is over.

This year's Homecoming seemed to go pretty smoothly, according to Jim Wyant, chairman of the Homecoming Committee.

"(Homecoming) came off very well, much better than I had anticipated," Wyant said. "We kind of thought that Homecoming would not be as good and make as good a showing as it had in the past because the sororities had not put in their floats, and with the attitude of the students toward Homecoming this year."

The 1985 Homecoming Queen was announced during Thursday's Variety Show. This year's queen was Laurie Von Stein, a 22-year-old senior from Bondurant, Iowa.

The Variety Show, which took place Oct. 10 and 11 went very well, Wyant said.

"It was slightly shorter, which was really good. The Variety Show historically has been too long," said Wyant.

The parade also went well this year, according to Wyant, despite its shortened length.

"The parade was slightly shorter in time—not much—but that was because we had about half the number of bands that we've had in the past," Wyant said. "I really don't think it was all that bad."

The sororities did not enter any floats in the parade this year due to incidents at the beginning of the year that limited their financial budget, according to Wyant. This also contributed to the shorter parade.

There were no reported problems with alcohol this year, Wyant said.

"That was something we publicized heavily and got criticized for, I think, from a lot of organizations," Wyant said.

The most anticipated problems were related to alcohol in the parade, but there weren't no problems encountered.

"We were going to monitor alcohol violations in the parade specifically," Wyant said. "That's where we've seen it in the past."

During last year's parade a student driving one of the floats was arrested for careless and imprudent driving and for driving while intoxicated after his float struck another student.

Awards were presented to student organizations for their efforts in Homecoming. The top finishing organizations and their categories were:

*Greek Men: Parade floats--1. Tau Kappa Epsilon; 2. Phi Sigma Kappa; 3. Alpha Kappa Lambda.

Awareness plans set

BY GREGORY KELING
News Editor

During the week of Oct. 21-27, students will have the opportunity to learn the effects of irresponsible drinking by attending Alcohol Awareness Week events.

Activities scheduled for the week include a controlled sobriety test, guest speakers on the subject of "Responsible Drinking," (the theme of the week), an open forum to discuss stricter enforcement of drinking laws and a dance.

Rae Lynn, Alcohol Awareness committee advisor, introduced the idea for the week to various organizations on campus so that Northwest may participate, along with many other universities, in the week's nationwide observance during this National Alcohol Awareness Month.

The week's activities will begin with a controlled sobriety test at 6 p.m., Oct. 21 in the Spanish Den of the J.W. Jones Union. The test will monitor the reflexes of four volunteers after they drink measured amounts...of alcohol. The test is designed to show the decrease in reaction time of reflexes due to drinking. An officer of Maryville Public Safety will observe the test.

A trio of guest speakers will be on hand at 8 p.m. on Oct. 22 in the Union Ballroom to discuss the effects of irresponsible drinking. Julian Pickens, public relations director for the Valley Hope Treatment Center in Atchison, Kan., will discuss how alcoholism can disrupt the family life. Jim Ray, a Northwest student, and his wife will discuss the effects of alcoholism on school study habits and the students' grades. The Rays are representing Alcoholics Anonymous. Psi Chi and Harambee are sponsoring the speakers.

Members of Students Against Drunk Driving (SADD), a social service worker, a highway patrol officer, a tavern owner and other community figures will be on hand to lend their views to either side.

On the subject of SADD, Chris Wainwright, Student Senate member, will be chairing a committee to establish a local chapter of the national organization. At the present time, Wainwright has assembled a seven-person committee to look into ways to organize the local chapter.

An open forum at 8 p.m. on Oct. 23 in the Spanish Den will address the question, "Should the laws pertaining to alcohol in the city of Maryville be more vigorously enforced or not?" Tim Beach, Student Senate president, will mediate between the opposing sides. The forum is being sponsored by Phi Sigma Alpha.

Planned student events for the week will come to a close with a dance sponsored by Campus Activity Programmers, Student Senate, Alpha Sigma Alpha, Phi Mu and Sigma Sigma Sigma. The dance will begin at 8 p.m. on Oct. 24 in the Spanish Den. Music will be provided by Clean Break.

Carol Draheim (Bobby Bearcat) and Rachelle Jeffrey (Mule Cheerleader) of Phi Mu presented their rendition of "Little Red Riding Hood" during the 1985 Homecoming Variety show on Oct. 10 and 11.

Phi Mu took second place in the greek women variety show category next to Delta Zeta's first place win. The break-down of awards given during Homecoming can be found in the top story.

Organization seeks alternate areas of study

BY KELLY KIRKPATRICK
Staff Writer

The Alternate Spiritual Knowledge Seekers (ASKS) organizational purposes were unclear to non-members of the group when it was accepted as an official campus organization, according to Dr. Christopher Kemp, co-advisor to ASKS and assistant professor of sociology.

The purpose of ASKS, as stated in its constitution, is "to seek and provide information and programs designed to unite studies in the areas of the humanities, depth psychology, and comparative religion."

Kemp said that there has been some confusion about what ASKS is all about. He said this confusion arose when it was learned at a Student Senate meeting that the group's first guest speaker gave a lecture on witchcraft. This gave some people the idea that ASKS was formed to study the occult.

"This whole thing was blown out of proportion," said Kemp. "We're pretty much a general interest group." He said the group was formed to study fields of knowledge not offered at Northwest, not the occult.

Kemp said he believes the group's acceptance was arrived at fairly. "Those people opposed to the group have certainly had a chance to express their opinions," he said. "I think it was democratic."

Jennifer Jones, a student senator, agreed that ASKS was approved of democratically.

"We had discussions for and against before we voted on their constitution," Jones said. "We began discussing it probably two weeks in advance." Jones said Student Senate could find no reason why ASKS should not be accepted.

Early donations exceed half of United Way goal

BY KELLY KIRKPATRICK

The United Way campaign for Nodaway County got rolling Sept. 10 and will run through Nov. 19. The non-profit charitable organization has raised nearly 60 percent of its $75,000 county-wide goal, and expects to raise the remaining 40 percent.

Dr. Richard Fulton, chairman of United Way's university division and professor of government at Northwest, said the organization is well on its way to attaining their $75,000 goal.

"We made it last year and we're pretty well along this year," Fulton said.

Gary Plummer, volunteer campaign chairman for Nodaway county, said money collected through the fund-raising drive will be divided among nearly 20 charitable agencies, both inside and outside of Nodaway county.

Some of the agencies which will receive funds are 4-H, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Adult Basic Education and Living, Salvation Army, Red Cross, the Special Olympics and the Sexual Assault Center. Plummer said it's easier for these charitable organizations to raise funds collectively than by themselves.

"All these agencies have their own particular purposes," Fulton said. For example, Red Cross uses United Way funding for emergency- and disaster-aid and the Sexual Assault Center utilizes funds to help rape victims learn to cope with the effects of rape.

Plummer said United Way has several different divisions which collect funds. There are rural, business, residential, university, and industrial divisions, among others. Each division collects donations from a specific area of the community.

"The biggest is the industrial division," Plummer said. "This division accounts for about half of our revenue." Industries and banks are among the contributors to the division.

"Our goal for the university is $7,500," Fulton said. "We're about 60 percent there now." He said the university division's funds come mainly from the faculty and staff, through payroll deductions or cash donations.

Fulton said county-wide goals tend to go up each year due to inflation.

Last year's goal for Nodaway county was $70,000, Fulton said. The goal was not only reached, it was surpassed, with United Way raising 5 percent more than it had originally planned.

Project focuses on region's economy

Northwest to set up small-business center

BY MIKE DUNLAP
Staff Writer

Northwest announced Monday that it is undertaking a $100,000 project to establish a Small Business Development Center (SBDC) in Maryville. The Center will serve as a practical, comprehensive management resource for current and aspiring small business owners and managers.

The purpose of the center is to link the resources of government, business and educational institutions to provide quality assistance for small businesses.

"With the establishment of the Small Business Development Center, this university has additional opportunities to impact with significance the economic environment of the Northwest Missouri region and to help improve the quality of life for its citizenry," Northwest President Dean Hubbard said.

SBDC anticipates providing one-on-one business counseling, consultation with university faculty and graduate students, seminars on business management, and referral to other business resources within the community.

An extension office of SBDC will be established on three campus of Missouri Western State College (MWSC) in St. Joseph.

"This is another example of the cooperative efforts of the institutions to address regional needs, and, in this instance, to improve the economic conditions of the region," MWSC President Janet Murphy said.

Ron DeYoung, dean of the School of Business and Government at Northwest, pointed out that SBDC will strengthen the "backbone" of the region's economy. He stated that 20 million new jobs were added to the national economy in the past decade by small- and medium-sized companies.

Senator Pat Danner of Missouri's Twelfth District reiterated DeYoung's remarks, citing a University of Missouri study which predicted that this region will be more sparsely populated and financially poorer in the next decade. She called the creation of SBDC a "running start on this problem."

SBDC is being funded through a grant from the Small Business Administration, and the university has received other donations to help fulfill its obligation of providing matching funds. MWSC, the Maryville Chamber of Commerce, and St. Joseph Power and Light Company are all providing financial support for the project.

Other Missouri SBDCs exist in St. Louis, Kansas City, Springfield, and Rolla.

"There is as great a need for a center here as anywhere in the state," SBDC Director Dale Maudlin said. Maudlin is a former Chairman of the Board of the First Midwest Bancorp., Inc. "During my years as a banker, I saw many potentially successful businesses and farmers fail, due to a lack of available expertise in finance, marketing, accounting, production or some other critical area. As a result, the idea of working in the area of small business development is exciting to me."

The center is currently housed in the United Telephone Office Building in downtown Maryville, but will move to the university campus after its initial year of operation.

SBDC is open on weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Appointments may be arranged by calling the center at 562-1701.

AROUND THE GLOBE

Reagan refuses apology to Egyptians

(TNS)—President Reagan will not honor Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak's demand for an apology for the U.S. diversion of an Egyptian airliner carrying four Palestinian hijacking suspects, a White House spokesman said Tuesday.

The administration's refusal to apologize was the latest development in the diplomatic crisis that has followed the capture of the suspects. The suspects' release was negotiated by Egypt in return for their surrender of the hijacked Italian cruise liner, Achille Lauro.

The suspects are being held for trial by Italy, but Italy and Yugoslavia have run afoul of the United States by releasing Mohammed Abbas, the Palestine Liberation Front leader whom the United States has accused of masterminding the hijacking. Abbas has left Yugoslavia, a PLO representative and the Yugoslav news agency said.

A judge who was among the hostages aboard the Achille Lauro said Monday that a ship's bartender told him he watched as two hijackers shot a wheelchair-bound man in the chest and head.

Syrian authorities reported that the body of an elderly man had washed ashore near the Syrian port of Tartus. The U.S. State Department said it had not been determined whether the body was that of the dead passenger, Leon Klinghoffer, 69, of New York City.

Blunt warning sent to Philippines

WASHINGTON—President Reagan has sent his close friend Republican Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada, to see Philippine President Ferdinand E. Marcos, bearing what one administration official called "an extremely blunt message of warning" that the Marcos regime is in danger of being overthrown, according to The Washington Post.

The official said that assessments by the CIA and a special national security planning group indicated that the Philippines, with two vital U.S. military bases, could become "this administration's Iran" unless Marcos takes immediate steps to combat a growing communist insurgency.

One official called the message "the bluntest presidential message ever delivered to a friend." The official said that Marcos would be told that he was "screwing up the fight against the insurgency" and that his government was preoccupied with financial gain and domestic politics rather than combating the increasingly powerful New People's Army.

Earthquake levels Soviet republic

MOSCOW (AP)—An earthquake struck the Soviet Central Asian republic of Tadzhikistan on Sunday, leveling factories and office buildings and causing "loss of life," the official news agency Tass reported Tuesday.

Tass did not say how many people were killed or injured, nor did it give an assessment of the damage. The quake was described as strong, and the report of deaths indicated that the toll may be heavy.

Wallace Jacobs of the U.S. Geological Survey's National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., said the quake registered 5.8 on the Richter scale. Tass said it measured 8 points on the Soviet 12-point scale, which is capable of severe damage and heavy loss of life.

Space-defense program tests limited

WASHINGTON—Trying to resolve disagreement within the Reagan administration, Secretary of State George P. Schultz announced that the United States would continue to limit testing and development in its space-defense program, even though "a broader interpretation of our authority is fully justified," according to The Washington Post.

Schultz's statement followed criticism within the Atlantic alliance and in Congress that the administration's recent re-interpretation of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty would gut the pact. Schultz said that President Reagan "has chosen to take a narrower interpretation" of the treaty than the administration now thinks is legally required.

Local task force promotes safety belt usage

Maryville citizens are forming a task force to promote safety belt usage in the area.

"We Care" Buckle Up Maryville held an organizational meeting Wednesday night at the Farm and Home Community Center, 120 S. Main.

Coordinator Teri Harr said there is a need to increase the seat belt usage, especially since it is a state law. She added that Maryville has one of the lowest percentages of usage.

In a survey prepared for the Missouri Division of Highway Safety, Maryville has a 7.75 percent community seat belt use rate. This compares with 11.03 percent for Chillicothe, 15.77 percent for Kirksville, 19.74 percent for Kansas City and 21.75 percent for Cape Girardeau.

Lana Adcock, safety specialist for the Division of Highway Safety, said that last year only six or seven percent of the Cape Girardeau community was wearing safety belts. Through a task force similar to the one in Maryville, the percentage was increased to 21.75.

Adcock said the Division of Highway Safety has funding for communities wishing to start a task force. She said the Maryville task force could receive up to $15,000 in grants.

Harr said a Maryville program would include awareness, education and incentives to reach all age groups of the community.

Although the next formal meeting has not been scheduled, Harr said that "the Convincer" will be in town in November. The Convincer is a machine that simulates a car accident at 5 mph. Harr said people are buckled into the Convincer and ride the machine down an incline to feel the force of the crash.

The Convincer will be in Maryville from 2-5 p.m., Nov. 10 at the K Mart parking lot, 1414 S. Main. The Convincer will also be at Northwest from 2-4 p.m., Nov. 11 in the Quads area if weather permits, or in the Student Union.

Alfred McKemy stands near the Agriculture Mechanics Building named in his honor.

Ag building dedicated

Northwest dedicated the Alfred McKemy Agriculture Mechanics Building Tuesday in honor of Alfred McKemy who served on the university Board of Regents from 1975 to 1985.

Following remarks by university officials, McKemy said his association with the Regents and the university faculty, staff and students "is honor enough for anyone."

McKemy called Northwest a "university on the move," and applauded the agriculture program for producing "outstanding graduates, important service to the region and having positive economic impact upon the citizens of the service area." In addition, McKemy promised to continue to do all that he could to continue to work for the betterment of the university.

Homecoming visitors ticketed

Every year, the university encourages alumni, parents and other visitors to join the university in the Homecoming festivities. This year was no exception. A swarm of people invaded the university on Oct. 12. But a dubious red carpet was rolled out to meet them.

During Homecoming, the men in blue were ticketing cars. There aren't enough parking places on campus during the week and it's impossible when you add the crowd at the football game, plus approximately 2,000 alumni, parents and friends that come into town.

It is not good public relations to give tickets to friends of the university and alumni (remember they contribute to the Foundation) and to the parents (remember they pay tuitions).

There were cars ticketed for parking on the grass in the Armory lot; some had about 3 1/2 inches of their back tire on the grass, yet were socked with a $15 ticket, though it's doubtful if all 45 blades of grass died in the process. Is the university this badly in need of money?

Perhaps Campus Safety could undo their act by eliminating all tickets issued on campus over the weekend. However, those people from out of town will probably just ignore the tickets anyway and once again it will be the college students and staff hit with another fine/charge. It is somewhat hard to imagine students feeling good about a university that is constantly ticketing both the students themselves and their parents and friends (whom they were encouraged to invite in the first place).

If we are so worried about retention and good public relations then why is the university beating the hand that feeds it. Was it necessary to ticket on Homecoming?

Usage of safety belts lessens fatality risks

"I'm a good driver. I probably won't have an accident. Besides, I'm driving only a few blocks."

"I don't think that my safety belt will make much difference if I have an accident while driving 55 mph."

"It's a pain to buckle, it's uncomfortable and it wrinkles my clothes."

"If the car catches fire, I want to be able to get out right away."

These are the comments most heard from people who don't wear their safety belts. They are also the comments that most often kill them.

A handout entitled "Buckle Up Missouri," written by Teri Carr, states that in 1983, 339 Missourians died in car accidents. At least 95.5 percent of those killed were not wearing a safety belt.

Disabling injuries from car accidents happened to 2,982 Missouri residents in 1983. Of the people severely injured, 94.7 percent weren't wearing a safety belt.

People are dying from going beltless. The handout stated people who wear their safety belts sustain 70 percent fewer injuries and 50 percent fewer fatalities.

Some may think that these statistics don't say much. You still have a 50 percent chance of dying. But there is the same chance of living. That chance won't be there unless the belt is buckled up.

To cite an analogy, if a person was dying and needed an organ transplant, for example, most people would undergo the operation even if the success rate was 50 percent.

A safety belt is so much easier, simpler and inexpensive.

The five most common excuses for not wearing safety belts are: 1) the low perceived risk of being involved in an accident, 2) the lack of awareness of safety belt effectiveness, 3) inconvenience, 4) discomfort and 5) of being trapped in the car.

Accidents can happen anytime. Every time you get in a car, you may be in an accident, and you are playing Russian roulette by not wearing your safety belt. Even if you're a good driver, the fellow who hit you head-on may not be.

According to Sergeant Harvey Crow, Maryville Public Safety officer, most accidents happen two to five miles from home.

A safety belt is necessary for even the shortest trips. A safety belt may be inconvenient or uncomfortable, but being in a wheelchair would be a bigger inconvenience, and having a broken leg in traction is not a very comfortable. Both could result from an accident.

People spend thousands of dollars on insurance. Why not buckle up the safety belt? It could be the greatest insurance of your life.

Alumnus' Homecoming actions disputed

Dear Editor,

Homecoming festivities are over for another year. The growing crackdown on alcohol use in Maryville was felt by Homecoming parade participants as talks of sobriety tests prevailed. Students were warned about drinking along parade routes. In light of the accident last year involving a jalopy, a clown, and alcohol, it seemed a good idea to keep alcohol out of the Homecoming parade.

However, one group obviously didn't agree. Alumni found it necessary to mill around on the lawn of the Alumni House during the parade, blatantly drinking beer. I know this posed many questions in the minds of students and parents standing on the sidewalk in front of the Alumni House, or to anyone who witnessed this display of hypocrisy.

First of all, besides the fact that it was 10 a.m., drinking is not allowed on campus. The Alumni House is part of this University's campus; it is owned, operated and funded through Northwest and the state. Why then, is it acceptable for the alumni to drink? When questioned about this, the former director of alumni relations became rude and replied that it was one of "those special days." Who deems these "special days"? I would like to suggest that the day my sorority has its Christmas Informal at the Alumni House be deemed a "special day," and that those over 21 be allowed to drink alcohol. It's the same thing, isn't it?

It should be, but it's not. In the past, organizations have not been allowed to bring alcohol to their functions at the Alumni House. I'm sure they never will. What kind of double standard is this school imposing?

If the rules are good enough for the students to follow, then they definitely are there for the alumni and the administration to follow as well. It is only right to expect fair treatment. It should, in fact, be demanded.

In light of the recent events around the community involving the crackdown on alcohol use, it certainly is ironic that events such as this go unmentioned. I witnessed the very same scene last year at the Alumni House, when all the outcry and controversy about alcohol and the Homecoming parade was surfacing.

I think it is time that something is done about this hypocritical attitude. This particular problem of Homecoming has been grossly overlooked. Either we have rules or we don't—not just part of the time. Students have to follow the policies, why can't they?

Sincerely,
Diane Watson

Master Plan panel reports defended

Dear Editor,

I noted, with interest, your recent article and editorial concerning the report of the Subcommittee on Environmental Quality. Your opening sentence suggesting that the recommendations of the committee were based on a walking tour was certainly an attention attracting device. Unfortunately, it wasn't true.

The way it really happened was the following. The Committee was charged with examining the environment and limited by some assumptions from the Master Plan. One was the assumption that funds will become more difficult in the future. Another assumption was that student enrollment will decline. These are only assumptions and probably most of us hope they do not come true. Given the assumptions, however, we proceed much like an investigative reporter might. We gather evidence. Concerning the amount of space on campus we found the following evidence.

First, some other Universities operate with considerably less space per student. Second, our University records showing room usage indicate some rooms not being used to the fullest extent. Third, an on-site check of several rooms confirm number two above.

Your questions concerning cost renovation and possible relocations are good questions, for example. A person in a program such as publications, for example, who is already facing one move might begin to feel unwanted and unnecessary if they discover someone proposing yet another move. This is quite understandable. It's important, however, to get beyond the emotional stage and assess the idea of campus space calmly and scientifically. The question I would like to see answered is this. Does the University, in fact, have excess space? If the answer is yes, then it may be time for yet another committee to establish where some relocations can occur and if financial savings are possible.

I believe that the committee found a great amount of evidence to support the idea that we have excess space. In the open hearing, in private discussions since then, and in the campus newspaper last week, I have heard no evidence to the contrary. If such evidence exists, now is the time for it to be brought forward. If not, I think we must accept the idea of too much space and move to the next logical step.

Sincerely,
Dr. Dwight Maxwell

"I think that if they're 18 years old, they should be allowed to drink; they're allowed to go to war. They should be allowed to drink if they are allowed to go in the service. At 18 they're considered adults so they should be considered adults when they drink. I think the state law should be 18. If they're going to have a drinking age of 21 they should change the drafting age to 21. I can understand them not wanting it on campus but I feel they really watch a lot more to catch them drinking off campus."

"I think it's a person's own decision if they want to drink. I mean, (alcohol is) almost always available. It's their social life. I think it's fine to drink on campus as long as they stay on campus. They usually keep it on campus. I think the dry campus here is pretty dumb, actually. Everybody brings alcohol in here anyway. Everybody's drinking and everybody knows they're drinking. It makes for a lot of hard feelings when the R.A.s have to come in and bust every thing up."

"I don't think alcohol should be something that people should have to rely on to have a good time. If you're a Greek it's different. Like when I was an independent I'd get really frustrated sometimes. I mean, if you want to kick back sometimes and have a beer I think you should be able to. I mean they treat us like a bunch of kids sometimes. I don't think they should try to change the dry policy because the kids would just abuse it."

"Alcohol on the college level is not something that I think the students have not been exposed to because at high school most students have been exposed to alcohol. On a college level you should be mature enough to know when you've had enough or whether you want to drink or not. We should be able to regulate whether we want to drink or not."

Students can change themselves with help of Counseling Center

BY KATHY PARMENTER
Features/Entertainment Editor

There's often more to the package than just the wrapping. What's inside is usually the important part. That analogy can be used in describing Northwest's Counseling Center, located in Hake Hall.

The center, manned by Drs. David Sundberg, Carol Detmer and Kileen Kolenc, offers counseling to students who need help with loneliness, depression and marriage or relationship problems. The center also conducts programs of self-improvement.

Sundberg listed study skills, assertiveness training, advocacy training and dynamic skills as some of the center's more popular programs.

"Students realize they don't like where they are at and want to change that," Sundberg said in an explanation of how a student might get started in one of these programs. "These people are open to explore and create their own lives."

Creating new areas for students is accomplished at the Counseling Center by offering help in three major areas of academic skills. These academic areas might include such things as learning how to better read and understand a textbook, how to manage time, or how to make decisions.

"These people are open to explore and create their own lives"

-Sundberg

Helping a student expand their attention span might be an area where goals are accomplished through improved reading skills or time management skills.

Deciding if a change is needed in the student's major field of study and determining how to achieve that change is another area with which the Counseling Center often helps students. The center gives career tests designed to help a student see which areas their interests would be compatible with. Then counseling is offered about jobs in those areas which might be of interest to the student.

Advocacy training, another area the Counseling Center provides help in, can be done on a group basis. An example of a past program was one that addressed rape advocacy training. Sometimes the groups will meet in the dorms or at another designated spot on or off campus.

Sometimes a student is not happy with their life, they just wish it were different. In their search for a way to make it better, they become confused and often seek help from the center. Such is the case of one student on campus, who asked not to be identified.

"I began to think something was really wrong with me."

The young woman said: "I saw that my life was just not going where I wanted it to. I really didn't know what I wanted to do or how I wanted to change it, but I wanted something. I searched around, kind of groping, and just couldn't find what I wanted. Finally I began to think something was really wrong with me, so I went to get some counseling. Since then I have been working on a more positive approach to life—things like being able to stand up for what I think is right, improving study habits and just taking control of my life in general. It's been a big help to me."

People who come to the center are open to create and explore their own lives, as Sundberg put it. If that's what counseling is all about, it would seem that this young woman has certainly achieved a new level of creativity and self-awareness. She seems a poised and self-confident person today—not the person she says she was before counseling.

"I was frightened of people, I guess. I was brought up in a very strict background, where I was taught to be a nice girl and not talk back. Sometimes, you have to unlearn some of that 'nice girl' stuff if you want to make it in this world. I'm still that nice girl, but now I hope I won't be taken advantage of."

There's more to the Hake Hall package than the wrapping, that's for certain. When you open the door to Hake Hall the first thing you notice inside is the friendly, warm atmosphere. The second thing you find is people who are there to help you with any kind of problem. If you just want to talk or if you want to recreate your life, the counseling center is a good place to start.

The "Faust" opera will be presented at the Mary Linn Performing Arts Center.

Lyric to bring "Faust" to Northwest

A touch of class is coming to Northwest. The Lyric Opera of Kansas City will perform the opera "Faust", Oct. 18 at 8 p.m. in the Mary Linn Performing Arts Center.

The opera, written by Charles Gounod, is described as "the story of man's eternal struggle between good and evil."

The story centers around an elderly philosopher named Faust, who makes a pact with the devil to receive youth, wealth and power, in exchange for his soul.

In the course of the drama, Faust falls in love with the beautiful and innocent Marguerite.

Gran Wilson will portray Faust. Karen Hunt, who is new to the Lyric, will portray Marguerite. Other cast members include Barbara Schramm, Brian Steele, Robert Ferrier and Linda Sinsey.

The opera will be performed in English.

Northwest's theater department will help Lyric with lighting and set preparation. They will also assist in setting up and dismantling the production set, and will help with sound on the set.

Tickets are on sale at the J.W. Jones Union Office. Prices are $5 for adults, $4 for Northwest faculty and staff and $3 for students. The box office at the Performing Arts Center will be open 45 minutes before the production.

Outdoor Program sponsors Colorado ski weekend

BY MOLLY ROSSITER
Staff Writer

On November 8, the Outdoor Program is sponsoring a weekend ski trip in Steamboat, Colo.

The trip, which is the first of two scheduled for this year, is open to anyone who wishes to participate, said Karen Yescavage, Public Relations Chairman of the Outdoor Program.

"The Outdoor Program runs their trips through Trips Unlimited," said Yescavage. "Either that or Alpine Ski Tours."

Cost for the trip is $120, which includes one night in a condominium, two days of lift tickets, and transportation. There is a $50 deposit for the trip due October 18.

The only problems experienced with past trips were related to the reservations.

"Last year the people had a delayed day or something," said Yescavage. "We didn't just move in the morning we got there. We had to ski that day and then move in."

The group will leave by bus this year, though it is not certain whether they will be able to take just one Northwest bus.

"Last year we took one Northwest bus and one (charter) bus," said Yescavage.

The trip is scheduled for the weekend of November 8-11. The group will leave Northwest the afternoon of the 8th, arrive the morning of the 9th, and will have approximately two days of skiing, according to Yescavage.

Skiing is a favorite outdoor program offered by Northwest. This year's trip is scheduled for November 8-11.

SPOTLIGHT

Tina Turner earns six platinum records

Tina Turner was presented with six platinum records for sales of "Private Dancer" in Canada by Capitol-EMI president J.D. Evans.

Turner's latest single "We Don't Need Another Hero" already has surpassed the gold mark in Canada.

Turner is currently doing a series of concerts with Atlantic artist John Parr, whose current chart-topping success of his single LP, "St. Elmo's Fire (Man in Motion)," earned him a visit to the New York studios of NBC's Source Radio Network, where he was interviewed by Rona Elliot.

Two other artists, Whitney Houston and Los Lobos have been on promotional tours lately. Whitney Houston spent over three hours signing copies of her gold Arista debut album for fans in Washington, D.C. and Los Lobos has just returned from a two-week jaunt to Japan.

Houston's first single, "You Give Good Love," was a No. 1 record in Kemp Mill in Washington, D.C. when she did the promotion and appeared in concert there.

Upon Los Lobos return, they immediately began work on writing and recording materials for their next album. To be produced by T-Bone Burnett and Steve Berlin—as was last year's "How Will the Wolf Survive?"—the band is also set for a short trip to Australia in November.

Meadowlark offers listeners alternative

Billie Ray Hearn, president of Sparrow Corporation, a Christian music company, based in Chatsworth, Calif., has announced plans for the formation of Meadowlark Records, a label devoted to instrumental music. The new label is described in a release as "a quieter alternative musical format for the rapidly expanding selective buyer's market."

According to Hearn, Meadowlark Records is expected to begin operations late this month.

Prince, Vandross to return to big screen

Prince and Luther Vandross will be returning to the screen soon with new productions.

A new movie, "Under the Cherry Moon," will feature Prince as a musician in France who plays in a bar. The film will be released sometime next year.

Mary Lambert, director of Madonna's videos, will be responsible for the project. No details about Prince's musical contributions to the movie or the anticipated soundtrack have been announced.

Recently, entertainer Luther Vandross mentioned that one of his ambitions was to meet and produce three of his own musical inspirations: Dionne Warwick, Diana Ross and Aretha Franklin. Part of this dream came true with "Jump To It," a top 10-hit produced by Vandross for Aretha.

With her latest LP "Who's Zoomin' Who," Aretha is back to recapture those who were too young to witness the Queen of Soul in her prime.

CASH BOX

In an unsure business, MCA Records' soundtrack from the television series "Miami Vice" seems like a sure thing. In fact, the just-released album has everything going for it: proven singles, diverse cuts from popular artists, and most significantly, a built-in, widespread audience.

Yet, key people at MCA and throughout the music industry know there's far more at stake with this album than just profits. They realize the entertainment community as a whole appears poised on the threshold of an eruptive new trend. Prime-time rock has come of age.

Contemporary songs and hit songs have emanated from TV shows before; shows as polarized as "Greatest American Hero" and "General Hospital." Programs such as "Mission Impossible" and "Star Trek" have spawned soundtrack albums. However, the "Miami Vice" LP is the first of its kind, the first major "poptrack" derived from a single TV series. The show, with its skillful blend of music and visuals, has done what no regular series could do before. It has made television credible in the eyes (and ears) of contemporary musicians.

For that reason, such notable performers as Tina Turner, Phil Collins, Chaka Khan, Grandmaster Melle Mel, Jan Hammer and Glenn Frey have written material directly for, or allowed the use of their work on, "Miami Vice." Why have so many musical heavyweights flocked to such a formerly avoided medium? Fred Lyle, for the show, said, "The music we choose fits. It is irreplaceable and integral. We treat it with respect. It's never gratuitous."

In order to probe the story of the "Miami Vice" soundtrack further, Larry Solters, MCA Records' senior vice president of artist development, was consulted. "It's been very exciting for us," he said. "Our involvement really began when Michael Mann (executive producer of "Miami Vice") chose Glenn Frey's "Smuggler's Blues" (off his "Allnighter" LP) for the show." When the Frey song wound up inspiring an entire episode, in which the artist appeared himself, the song rapidly took off, on both the radio and the retail level.

As a result of the success of "Smuggler's Blues," the former Eagle suddenly established a highly bankable association with "Miami Vice" which propelled him to the top as a solo performer. Frey's latest single from the soundtrack of "Miami Vice" soundtrack is called "You Belong To The City," which will be heard on the show this season.

MCA's Miami Vice soundtrack contains 11 cuts, four of which are instrumentals composed by Jan Hammer, who writes all of the episodes' scores. His main theme, and the song "You Belong To The City" are quickly ascending Cash Box's singles chart, with both already in the Top 40. MCA has announced future singles, but the other songs written and recorded specifically for the show, (Khan's "Own The Night" and Grandmaster Melle Mel's "Vice") are likely contenders.

All of this suggests a new era. Whether TV producers will turn out pale rip-offs of "Miami Vice" or respectable competitors remains to be seen. So long as the trend isn't misused for strictly commercial reasons (and audiences are sophisticated enough to know when that's happening), the future of rock on prime time is limitless. As Solters put it, "It's time we utilized the power of television. There are an awful lot of people out there."

Cash box

More writers like Glenn Frye are using their talents to produce hit songs for leading television shows, such as "Miami Vice."

STROLLER

Our Hero victimized by dorm R.A.

If you remember from last week, we left Our Hero with a comatose, intoxicated debutante in his arms, and it was after hours in Richardson Hall. You will also remember the motive for Our Man being there, and I assure you it was not because of his concern about the young lady tripping on her way upstairs. And you're probably wondering what took place after she left the conscious world. Believe it or not, The Stroller felt sorry for Michelle (yes, he remembered her name), and after she passed out he could not bring himself to go in for the kill. True, he had worked for the moment, but he did learn something about morality from Dr. Hopper's Ethics class, and decided against using the situation to his hormonal benefit. But, if she even showed a glimmer of consciousness—look out!

Your Man fell asleep on the floor that night, and awoke with a severe pounding within his head as the first beams of dawn made their way through the window. He really had to go to the bathroom, but where at 6:30 a.m. in a girls' dorm? He shook Michelle; she only responded with a murmur and a belch (she didn't seem to look as pretty in the morning, either). So, he tiptoed toward the door in his bare feet. He opened it only a crack, looking to see if the halls were clear. He slithered into the corridor, trying to be as soundless as possible, but was sure that the pounding in his head and the gurgling in his stomach were more than audible. He heard a door open behind him as he rounded a corner and looked over his shoulder to see if he had been noticed. He was not watching where he was going of course, and ran into a rather obese woman who was coming from the shower, knocking her down on the floor with a rather loud, "Kerflop!"

It took the buxom lass a second or two to gain her composure, but when she realized that she had just been thrown to the ground by an oversexed creature of desire who had no business being in the women's residence hall, she screamed, "Rape!!!"

Of course, the Stroller—that knight of chivalry and all around white hat-wearing sort of guy—never intended any sort of action, and if you had seen the woman you would have known why (maybe a different story if she even slightly resembled Cheryl Tiegs, but this girl was uglier than a mud fence in a rainstorm!). Anyway, when she started screaming, perhaps a dozen heads came sticking out from behind doors. And to think, all of this because of an undersized bladder.

Instinctively, Our Hero ran away from the screaming beached whale down the hall. Unfortunately that way was also the way to the R.A.'s room. Hell hath no fury like that of a scornful female R.A. This one looked like a cross between Martina Navratilova and Clint Eastwood. She came out of her room, brandishing a racquetball racquet, placed herself between Our Hero and the exit and said, "Go ahead, pervert, make my day!"

"I only want to go to the john," he tried to explain, but she rushed him, swinging the racquet at him, and screaming like a cat in a fan belt. He turned and ran the other way, right into a crowd led by the screaming whale, all of which were carrying racquetball racquets as well (it was part of their self-defense program sponsored by South Complex, "proficiency with athletic equipment!").

Our weak-bladdered Hero put his head down and bulled his way through the pack, taking several graphite and aluminum blows across the head, back and buttocks. He emerged from the throng, ran down the hall, his heart pounding, temples throbbing, chest pumping for more air, kidneys screaming for relief, with the pack of killer whales on his tail. He could feel their hot breath on the nape of his neck and their sharp talons clawing, just missing his back. His feet continued to pump up and down wildly, but the door to the outside world kept getting farther and farther away; the hall seemed endless. He could hear them screaming for his blood, "Kill him! He's a pervert! Castrate him!"

He was almost to the door: safety, the real world, an escape from hell. He was not 50 feet away when a crashing blow from a racquet fell upon his head, driving him down to the ground. The jackals pounced upon him, his legs still running but not going anywhere. The blows continued to fall, but no longer did they hurt individually. His whole backside from his head to his heels was a living fire of agony. He realized there was no escape. The blows, from the racquets and feet were striking him everywhere—on the shins, the knees, in the groin, in the stomach. They were going to kill him, and just because he had to go to the bathroom.

Michelle's voice whispered in his ear, "It's time for you to go home." He woke up. He was still in her room. It had all been a dream. No fat girls, no racquetball racquets, no Rambo R.A. But he did have to go to the bathroom. He gave Michelle a kiss, wearily sneaked out the door, down the hall, out the door, across the lawn, and then he realized he had forgotten his shoes. He turned and looked at Richardson Hall, and Your Hero could have sworn he saw Rod Serling standing in the doorway. Forget the shoes, he'd come back during open hours.

Consolation champs

BY CATHY HOBART
Staff Writer

Mirroring the results at the Metro State Invitational two weeks ago, the Bearkitten volleyball team wound up with the consolation-bracket championship at the Missouri Western Invitational in St. Joseph, Oct. 11-12.

Friday was a long day for the 'Kittens, starting pool play at 9 a.m. and finishing at 8:40 p.m. The 'Kittens played a total of five teams on the day.

"At times we were inconsistent as in the past, but we were pleased because we had a long day," Head Coach Cathie Shulte said. "We could have easily given up, but instead we hung in there and played well."

In pool play, the 'Kittens overpowered College of St. Mary 11-15, 16-14, 15-5 and Benedictine 15-17, 15-8, 15-9 for their two wins.

The 'Kittens, however, were held back by Wisconsin-Milwaukee and Washburn University, losing 12-15, 11-15 and 13-15, 12-15. This ended the 'Kittens first day of pool play with a record of 2-2. The 'Kittens also defeated Briar Cliff in the quarter-finals of the consolation bracket 15-12, 15-5.

"We played a good match against Wisconsin-Milwaukee, who won the tournament," Schulte said.

The 'Kittens were off to a good start on Saturday, beating Doane College 15-6, 15-13 in the semifinals.

The 'Kittens then took the consolation title over College of St. Mary 15-2, 15-6.

"We could've been a little more aggressive on hitting and more consistent on serving," said Schulte. "However, our serve reception was good, along with passing. We have to be pleased with that."

Although the 'Kittens didn't win the invitational, Susie Thomas was named MIAA Volleyball Player of the Week.

"Being MIAA Player of the Week was a compliment not only to Susie but also to the team," said Schulte.

Since the 'Kittens have been on the road for the past two weeks, Schulte said that they are glad to be back home for their next meet when they host the Northwest Invitational, Oct. 18-19.

"The toughest team we'll play is Nebraska-Omaha," Schulte said. "We can play with them if we get motivated and move. Winning depends on how determined we are."

Linebacker Tim Stallings (right) comes to the rescue a little bit too late, as linebacker Steve Savard has the situation well in hand. Savard totaled 13 tackles on the day, that saw the Bearcats defeat Central Missouri State 18-10.

I-70 series now a reality

It was a dream that became reality. It was something that people thought would never happen, but it did. The Kansas City Royals and the St. Louis Cardinals are going to be playing in the World Series, the I-70 World Series that is.

Both teams won the right to baseball's big finale by clinching pennants yesterday. The St. Louis Cardinals did theirs in a thrilling fashion, as Cardinal Jack Clark hit a three-run homer in the top ninth to beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 7-5.

Meanwhile, the Kansas City Royals used a two-run homer by Pat Sheridan to boost them to an 6-2 win over the Toronto Blue Jays.

After the first two games for the Cardinals and the Royals, it looked like neither team would have a chance to go to the series. Both teams had lost, and the prospect of having an I-70 Series deminished.

However, neither team gave up. Both teams had lost the games away from home. But, when they returned to their familiar surroundings, it was like starting all over again.

The series between the Royals and the Cardinals will be a unique one. One reason is because this is the first time that two teams from within the same state have played each other in a series.

Another reason is because the Cardinals skipper, Whitey Herzog, once managed the Royals. He knows what they can do since he has instilled the same characteristics in his own ballclub.

Nonetheless, it will be an exciting series. It will be a series that will be remembered.

When people look back at last Saturday's Homecoming game, many spectators probably will remember the 'Cats' late defensive fourth-down stand the most. Clinging to an 18-10 lead, the Bearcat defense was able to preserve the lead against the Central Missouri State Mules.

With about three minutes left in the game and the 'Cats ahead, the Mules substained a drive all the way down to the 'Cats' 12-yard line. The Mules had previously started from their own 20-yard line. However, the Mules were immediately set back five yards after being penalized for delay of game.

This gave them (the Mules) a fourth down situation. The Mules' quarterback dropped to pass, but was unable to connect the pass with an open receiver. The 'Cats took over possession on their own 17-yard line and were able to run out the clock and end the game.

"When they got down to that fourth down situation, the first thing we (the 'Cats) did was to look and see what they run in critical situations," Bob Green, defensive backs coach, said. "We thought they're gonna run the deep seam, which they did. We knew they would run it, but we thought it would come from the tight end, not the motion man."

"What was running through my mind before the play was the fact it was fourth down," Steve Savard, linebacker, said. "I knew that if we stopped them, we would probably have the ball game."

Neither team was able to score until late in the first quarter. The 'Cats had just gotten the ball on their own 40-yard line with a little over two minutes left in the first quarter. The 'Cats struck immediately for a touchdown on a pass of 60 yards.

from quarterback Mark Thomsen to tight end Dan Anderson. This made the score 7-0 'Cats.

The Mules took the second-quarter opening drive and went down to the 'Cats' 12-yard line before etching three points on the scoreboard.

With the 'Cats leading 9-3 (the 'Cats got a safety when the Mules' punter ran out of bounce within the 'Cat end zone), the Thomsen-to-Anderson combination struck again, this time with a 42-yard touchdown throw. The 'Cats increased their lead to 15-3, after a two-point conversion failed for the 'Cats.

The score came with 14 seconds left in the first half, and ended scoring for the half.

On their second drive of the second half, the 'Cats added three more points to the scoreboard. This time it came on a Peter Rameh 38-yard field goal. The score now stood at 'Cats 18, Mules 3.

The 'Cats held the Mules scoreless throughout the entire third quarter, but the Mules scored their first touchdown of the game early in the fourth quarter.

Thomsen led all quarterbacks in the game with 236 yards passing. He threw 26 passes, 16 of which were complete, and he had no interceptions. Thomsen also had two touchdown strikes.

Both of those strikes came to Anderson, who compiled 157 yards. He caught five passes, his longest being the 60-yard touchdown reception.

Mike Thomas led the game in rushing, with 86 net yards. Running back Robert Wilson was right behind him with 80 yards rushing.

Savard led the Northwest defensive attack with 13 tackles, two of which were unassisted.

"The fourth-down stand at the end of the game for us really gave us a tremendous lift," Head Coach Vern Thomsen said.

"We knew they had to score, or the game would be over. The defense came in and played well."

Anderson was the recipient of the Don Black trophy, which goes to the player voted most valuable in the game.

Russian-style wrestling is aggressive, physical

It can be spelled sambo, sombo or cambo, but it all means the same thing—wrestling.

Sambo wrestling originates from the Soviet Union. It was developed by Anatoly A. Harlampiev, a prominent wrestler. The earliest form of sambo wrestling dates back to the mid-1930s. Harlampiev incorporated judo with many of the local Russian wrestling styles to come up with the early form.

Although getting its start in the Soviet Union, sambo wrestling is as close as Northwest's back door. The Karate Club, which meets twice a week on campus, practices sambo wrestling. They have one student in particular that excels in the sport and that is sophomore Justin Schaefer. It was not until he got to Northwest that Schaefer really got involved in the sport.

"When I was a sophomore in high school, I was in a wrestling club," Schaefer said. "My coach had worked some with sambo wrestling and we worked on some of it then. However, I stayed with the formal type of wrestling until I got here.

"I had also started calling back to my old wrestling coaches, trying to find out about and get all the information that I could on sambo wrestling. I started working on judo. I figured since I've already had all the wrestling down from high school, I figured if I could just work in some judo moves, I should be okay, since it's a new sport. That's really how it came about."

Schaefer likes sambo wrestling a lot better than he does folkstyle wrestling (high school and collegiate wrestling).

"It's more physical than all other aspects of folkstyle wrestling," Schaefer said. "You have submission holds and you can slam a person. That's one way of total victory. It's just a lot more aggressive and more physical."

"There's no kicks or punches, it's all throws. If a person is thrown right, he won't get hurt, that is if that person knows how to fall right." Learning how to fall was one of the first things that Schaefer learned once he got in the martial arts program.

When Schaefer competes in sambo wrestling, it is usually in the form of tournaments. This is due to that it is not a sanctioned sport in college athletics. This past April, Schaefer competed in the junior and senior nationals in Kansas City. He placed first in the junior division and third in the senior division. Not only is the form of wrestling rewarding, but fun as well.

"If people have a wrestling background (wrestled in high school), it would be something interesting for them to try," Schaefer said. "It's really not that hard on a person's body if they train right. If they train wrong, they're going to get hurt. "I get enjoyment working out, just throwing each other around for a while and just getting up and walking away without getting hurt. It's a different kind of feeling. I guess you just kind of have to be a "mad man" to feel that way."

Men hold race in streets; beat Mules in dual meet

BY JIM BURROUGHS
Sports Editor

By placing the first seven runners in the race, the Bearcat cross country squad had a easy time in defeating Central Missouri State in a dual meet last weekend at Beal Park.

Bearcat Brad Ortmeier was the team's, as well as the meet's, overall winner, sporting a time of 31 minutes, 41 seconds, over the 10,000-meter course. Following right behind Ortmeier were teammates Rusty Adams, second, 33:07; Tim Hoffman, third, 33:19; Brian Grier, fourth, 33:19; and Mike Hayes, fifth, 33:28.

However, the line of consecutive finishers for the 'Cats did not end at the number five slot. Tom Ricker and Mark Mosbacher finished sixth and seventh with times of 33:38 and 33:49, respectively. Central Missouri filled the eighth and ninth spots, but Bearcats Mark VanSickle and Mike Lee finished 10th and 11th with times of 34:28 and 34:33, respectively. Lloyd Hunt rounded-out the last of the 'Cat runners with a 18th-place finish in 36:34.

The meet was run a little differently in that it was run on the roads of Maryville, instead of the race course at Nodaway Lake. Conditions were unfavorable due to the great amounts of rain the area had been hit with for most of the week.

"We were happy with the results," Richard Alsup, head coach, said. "I was really happy with the times that all of them (the team) ran. The times are a little deceiving, but it was a tough course. I'd say on a flat course, Ortmeier would have easily ran around 30 minutes."

"This was the best race for me so far," Ortmeier said. "It was also the best that the team has done also."

"Running on the roads was not much more difficult. Even though I wasn't bunched up with the rest of the runners, the second, third, fourth and fifth place runners were. That is really important for us to do."

However, Mosbacher had different views of the race.

"It was faster running on the roads than it would have been on dirt," Mosbacher said. "I think the coach made the course hilly on purpose. It was real challenging."

The harriers will get a little bit of a rest this weekend, competition-wise that is. They are preparing for the MIAA Championships, Oct. 28. The rest will be greatly appreciated, especially with one harrier in mind, Chris Wiggs.

Wiggs has missed the last two meets because of an inflamed tendon in his right foot. He has been working out with the team for about a week though, and by the time conference rolls around, he feels that he will be ready.

"It will hurt me a little bit (not being able to compete and work out) because I've gotten out of shape," Wiggs said. "Given two weeks, I'll be in good enough shape to compete. By regionals, I should be back to the level I was originally before the injury."

Defeating Central Missouri State is a first for harriers

Defeating Central Missouri State last weekend was a dream that became reality for the women's cross country team. The women harriers defeated the Jennies 23 to 35 in a meet that was run on the streets due to the wet conditions at Nodaway Lake, Northwest's home meet course.

Lisa Basich paced the women with a second place finish and a time of 19 minutes, 27 seconds over the 5,000-meter course. She was followed by Julie Carl, third, 19:29; DeeDee McCulloch, fifth, 19:59; Cherie King, sixth, 20:09; Allison Benorden, seventh, 20:27; Rita Wagner, eighth 20:46; Janet Bunge, 12th, 22:23; and Jeanne Plendl, 14th, 23:31.

The win over Central was very impressive for the women. It is the first time that the 'Kittens have beaten them in competition since cross country has been offered to women at Northwest. This was a goal they had set earlier in the season. They knew if they packed together that they would be successful at beating Central. The strategy paid off.

However, the win for the 'Kittens brought along with it flack from Central Missouri. The Jennies did not run their top runner, Darla Curp. Head Coach Richard Alsup said that Curp probably would have won the race individually, but the 'Kittens would have still won the meet out right.

He figures this by peeling-in Curp as the first place winner, and then the rest of the runners and how they finished in the race. With all the points tallied up, the 'Kittens still are the meet winners, just edging Central by one point—28 to 29.

"They had a good meet and they packed up well," Alsup said. "This is the first time that I can remember that they (team) had five runners within a minute of each other. That's what they have to do."

"That's what we shoot for in cross country, to pack them up, it's really, really great if we can do that."

Alsup has been pleased with the turnaround that the team has made. Earlier in the season, the women were nursing injuries and hadn't been able to run with a full squad.

King, who has been sick for the last two weeks, did very well at the Central dual. Wagner, only competing in her second meet for the 'Kittens, almost cut off a minute from her time from a week ago, and Plendl, who missed last week's meet, ran her fastest time yet.

"I think we all ran a good race," Carl said. "The course really made a difference because it was hilly. It was different because it was road running. It wasn't grass, which we normally run on. I think the course really psyched us up for conference."

The women have an extra week to prepare for the conference meet since it's not scheduled until Monday, Oct. 28, in Cape Girardeau. The race will take place on that day instead of Oct.

26, the date originally scheduled for the meet, because it conflicted with Southeast's Homecoming.

The extra week break from competition will if anything enable the 'Kittens to get stronger as a team. They will get a chance to get the squad 100 percent healthy, something that they haven't been able to really claim all season. Although they ran at a good clip last weekend, they should be more than ready when it comes time for conference.

"The girls are running very well, especially together," King said. "That's what we need to do. We need to pack well as a team. Last weekend we did and were within a minute of each other. To win, all we have to do is pack and all stay healthy."

Jeanne Plendl competes in a dual with Central last weekend.
